RASHID BEN ADDI

MISERY AND ANGER

INCOMPLETE STORIES

Misery and Anger

Incomplete stories

Rashid Ben Addi

The Scarecrow

It was four in the morning; he sat on his table which stood on flour that had nothing but a piece of cardboard as a carpet. His hands reached for a glass of dark water that supposed to be tea, he brought it close enough to his nose, and then, with sealed eyes, he drank it. He grabbed a piece of wood that presumed to be a piece of bread, shoved it into his pocket, and went out to his work dragging his worn-out clothes behind him. On the field stood just a scarecrow, shyly he greeted it and the scarecrow responded with a furious rage; you're late, you son of a bitch, it's five o'clock already. As shy as before he apologized and took the old scarecrow's place which left like a raging bull! The Scarecrow was his father. They have been both, alternately, occupying its spot. For since the father found out that the birds figured it out about the wooden scarecrow, he forced his son to take its position. All he could do was standing on the spot, and moving his hands from time to time to scare the birds away. He will stay like that till four p.m, after that, it'll be his father's turn again.

Standing there, he cried with the one eye he had left, for a bird gouged out his eyes a month ago. A beautiful bird had landed over his head one day, he didn't want to scare him off, and so he let him be. The bird thought that it was only a wooden scarecrow that wouldn't move. The bird was intrigued by the eye's pupil so it gouged it with its beak. And that was not it, but his father broke his left leg punishing him for his complacency with those damn birds.

Sometimes, alone in the middle of the field, he started laughing, he imagines his meeting with his beloved neighbor, to whom of course he couldn't confess his love, but he told her about it dozens of times in his imagination, and in each time, she used to laugh which made him laugh too… Hello! I'm a scarecrow and I love you.

Even after his father's death, he kept on working as a scarecrow, there was nothing else he could do! It didn't last long though, especially after being humiliated by his neighbor right after he expressed his love to her. The truth is that she didn't utter what could have hurt him, but she strangled him with her silence which he succeeded to translate it as: You are a Scarecrow for Hell's sake!

He woke up early, as usual, performed his Fajer prayer, and sent a silent prayer to Allah; Oh Allah, may you keep the birds away from me! He sighed.. twice, then stood from his spot, wore his clothes, and got out without waking up his gimp dog! Few miles and he reached the field… he squashed his corps into the worn-out clothes and start pondering the view ahead of him! A divine serenity brought faith and joy to his heart, which made him forget what he shall suffer from for the rest of the day! A bird singing in the middle of the grass.. two frogs lying idly underneath the only existing tree on the field! An aunt carrying a grain of wheat! Filthy underwear, an old shoe! Waking up from his mindedness, he asked for Allah's forgiveness, entrusted his soul to Allah and he got up! He chased away the birds and stood up like an old boat sail, extended his hands forming Jesus cross, after five minutes, he burst laughing; what the hell am I doing? What a lame of a job am I practicing? Like father, like son! The sons of a bitch are mocking us! To hell with my father and his craft! I will not do this anymore.

After years of working as a scarecrow, Omar died alone, in the middle of that massive field. He was dreaming of riding dragons when he died. After two weeks, a yellow flower cracked her way through his skull.

Buttons for sale

Ziad couldn't find a thing to sell but his coat buttons. He toured the city in vain in a desperate try to sell them. He squatted in the street thinking, he sorted them down on the floor and kept looking at them, what is your secret you damn buttons! Why won't anyone buy you? Sank in his unuseful thoughts, a homeless man surprised by asking him: How much those beautiful buttons cost? Ziad was amazed, and then took another look on the buttons and he discovered them to be beautiful, why didn't he notice that before! I'm sorry, they aren't for sale, I'm just enjoying their beauty.

He squashed the buttons into his pocket and went back to his room, he put them again on the table after he removed all that was on it from crust bread and some newspapers, he starts pondering at them again, but this time with a critic's eyes; I must find the beauty that that stupid saw in them, what interested him in worn-out coat buttons? What did he exactly see in them? Many questions kept him awake all night without being able to find answers for them!

He wished he had a cigarette to shut the annoying noise that these damned three buttons triggered in his heavy skull, his empty stomach growled asking for food, he found nothing but a crusty piece of bread that was on the table; where is it! He jumped from his place looking for it! Oh God, I'll accept anything but the disappearance of this piece of bread, it is all that I have, it and these ugly buttons! He squatted looking for it under the table, one of the buttons fall and vanished, at that moment he forgot about the bread and started looking for the button. He turned the room upside down but couldn't find it, he stood still in his spot and whispered to himself: It was just stolen! The piece of bread was just in front of him and he didn't touch it, he forgot about the hunger, he was robbed! It was that criminal of a cockroach that stole it, he stole the candy bar that I was saving for an emergency! What did this wretch also like about this button!

He kept on chewing the piece of bread in silence, curses, and swearwords bursting inside of him without allowing them out, that was him since he decided to quit drinking, everything had become a living hell that he wonders sometimes: Damn it! What's the point? Why won't I just keep on drinking?

The suffering starts from the early morning hours, six o'clock to be exact, the annoying shouting of his alarm starts, he wakes up freaking out, looks for the damned alarm to shut it down, he can't find it, he remembers he doesn't have one, not even a cell phone that could make such noise that woke him up from his death, he wonders, thinks, yawns, the radio starts working by itself, it blabbers a lot without making sense for him, the radios shushes after finding out that no one is listening. He closes his weary eyes so he could benefit from what had left of his sleep, yet the crazy alarm starts yelling again, he curses it .. again, goes to the bathroom, effortlessly urinates, it has the color of whiskey. He turns his head towards the mirror that is hanged in a non-fitting place, he has no clue on who put it there.. weird mirror. Run from here as fast as you can, it's not whiskey, it is urine .. run. He spoke to himself through the mirror.

He comes out quickly as he told himself, heads towards the kitchen, nothing there but empty glasses, No, No it has wine, where are the cigarettes, where is the lighter, shit..shit! The glasses are indeed empty!

He sensed a terrible fear, whose origin was unknown, his body was violently shaking, couldn't think of anything but wine, nowhere to escape to but his cold bed jumped in and slept...

The time went fast and the tacky alarm went back to screaming again, he opened his eyes slowly as if he just woke up from a long coma, he didn’t see a thing so he closed them as slowly as before, yet this time he tries to look at himself inside out, but he was shocked! His big eyes weren’t able to see him, he detected a huge amount of ugliness in his face, he saw his facial features in its true shape, colorless features, intrusive wrinkles invaded his face in his absence and the of his lazy mirror. He got up quickly and stood before it, he punched it with the hatred that he’d felt: Why didn’t you pay attention you wretch!

He wore his yellow coat and stood looking at the dying mirror; he uprooted all the disgusting liquids of his body and spitted them on what was last of it! Useless damn house! He kept yelling at the locked-up rooms; I will get rid of all of you when I come back. A deafening silence filled the entire house that he imagined that he heard the chairs and the pots shuddering in fear from him!

Violently he slammed the outer door, the old lady next door screaming and cursing, pointed his middle finger to her and kept walking as quickly as he always is, then he remembered that he had nowhere to go and he slowed down! He stopped for a moment to look for his box of cigarettes in his coat pocket, but he couldn’t find it so he shouted with all the despair that he felt. That vile house! The son of a bitch didn’t alert me; that’s it, I’ve had enough…

Like a raging bull he kicked the door and broke it, he violently opened the rooms to start throwing the furniture out of the window, but there was nothing there, the house had nothing but the murdered mirror, he opened his room door, it was empty as well, no bed, no pillow, not even a piece of cardboard, once again he was deeply shocked, and when he couldn’t find a thing to throw from his room window, he threw himself.

Good citizen

Five o’clock in the morning! The heavy sound of rain made me think of that man near the bus station! Him, whose bed was a piece of cardboard, and a plastic bag was his blanket! I am losing my mind trying to figure out why this city is being unfair to him, being harsh on him, he is just an ordinary man! Just a normal guy who lost his mind! Probably he was even a good citizen! I am sure he was! He has that look that my father has, an ordinary man who’s just trying to live his life but the city stops him from doing so! The city makes it hard on him; he can’t understand life around him! He lost the ability to understand! His mind is no more capable of grasping everything! And I’m sure, so sure that some days he was close to doing so! In a specific moment, he gets it all and he wonders: what the hell is happening to me! What am I doing here? I am no crazy! My mind is sane! I don’t have to sleep on the sidewalk at the bus station, Mom! Where is mom! Then, that second when he remembers his mother he loses his mind again! He gets tired of thinking and he just settles for sleep! The city breathes a sigh of relief, for a moment it really believes that he won.

I leave my warm bed and I open the window in a desperate try to get rid of this compassion that has always been one of my most horrid problems! I deepen in other people’s problems! And sometimes even in things that didn’t happen yet or might never even happen! But it keeps me up all night.

Hunger

My debts had reached a horrid number. I had nothing to do but to take off my face and shove it in a plastic bag till I disappear from the eyes of stockers, It has been this way for weeks, and to be honest, I got used to being faceless, I came to accept the fact that people can live without their faces.

I reached the rock bottom, I squatted down trying to soothe my empty stomach, it was making frightening sounds that I thought it will put on its wrap and abandon my meager body as mothers do, I tried filling it with water but I just made it worse. I wore my coat and got out to the street, my stomach is crying while my empty pocket is laughing at it. I thought about stealing some food but my legs would definitely betray me, I thought of begging too, but that would be impossible since it was my dignity that put me here in the first place. Nature can be merciful sometimes, it won't let its children and when it is the right time, it will interfere. I descried a blood donation van; I will donate my blood and get a free breakfast, well not exactly free for I will be buying it with my blood. I stood in front of the door so someone can see me, smile at my face, and then ask me to donate my blood. I will reject it at first and then I will jump in. That's exactly what happened, I huge lady welcomed me but she didn't smile it seems like she figured me out. Yet, she did what she had to do, then she thanked me; thank you, you can go now. I thought she forgot to give me my meal so I acted as if I was dizzy to give her more time to remember, but instead she asked me to leave again and leave space for another donor. Well, what about the breakfast that you give to donors? We are out of things to serve sir. What? You don't have anything anymore? Even an apple? A gum? Anything for hell's sake, nothing? Give me my blood you inflated bag; I am sure it was you who ate it all.

You damned! Fuck you!

I took my blood and get out after kicking the door, few steps and I fainted.

Writing

When I reached twenty-five, everything changed! I had just dropped out of the university for both moral and financial reasons. After just two months I discovered that university education doesn't suit me. As a person, I discovered that the educational system in Morocco was a week system doomed to failure! But as a young man with a healthy body, I had to work since I decided to drop out... The truth is I tried looking for a job, and when I got tired I took a break for a while! This period was really hard, like most parents, mine were rough on me for being unemployed… so I decided to avert being at home as long as possible, I had nothing to do but to look for a place to hide! And until now I don't really know if my escape to the public library was either a good thing or the worst decision I've ever made in my life! Since there, my dilemma began.

Without paying attention I read more that I should've, of course, such things shouldn't be said but that's what happened! I entered I world I was not prepared for, I was happy though, at least for a short period of time... but I kept going until I got trapped and I accepted the fact that I can't do anything else but writing especially after the issuance of my first novel... then, I knew that I have to be ready for a hard and complicated life because I have decided to be a Writer! And Writer only! For a duplexed life could've never fit me. Even if it was simple, the job could always kill creativity in my opinion! Writing was never a thing that we can only do when we are free; writing necessitates all our time and all our focus.

Believing in that throw me in another road .. road of hunger and poverty! And when I say poverty it means I was poor as a mouse in a church! What makes me feel relived is that I am not some young man who desires a lot, just subsistence, and life doesn't lure me... Cigarettes, coffee, and a piece of bread are sufficient.. but even these things that might seem simple, I suffer to have them, and it has been many times that I just felt suffocated and my soul moldered…Never blamed anyone for what I had been through, although I do complain of how cold I had been treated by others … but I was brave and willing to die poor!!

I wasn't naïve to think that I might live of writing, I knew that it was hard... And everybody knows, why? Because I was willing to gamble... I am a sad and pessimistic man and not ashamed to admit it, and the future doesn't scare me, maybe because I am so sure that when the situation worsens more than what a can bare I am willing to take my own life.

I wouldn’t say that my decision was better than that of my fellow writers whom beside writing they work, and truth be told I don’t have a clue on how they do it, and many times I find myself envying them for it! And I am sure that difference will be obvious, and it should be!

After five years of stubbornness and persistence to follow the path of writing, I concluded that no matter what path we'll choose, we'll end up in the same place! The difference is the price we pay to do so! In my case, it was a high one, for I lost my family, my friends, and my girlfriends! And nothing is harder than losing relationships.

It happens that sometimes I talk to myself, what am I doing? Why am I keeping on being this stubborn? What made me keep walking towards the unknown? Many questions that I know I will figure them out! How and when? I don’t know.

Poor love

Love in rock bottoms is not much of love, plain bread and cracked hands deformed it and turned it to a sin that couldn't be interceded with a prayer! In there, love is a child selling cigarettes on the sidewalk, love is a little girl walking barefoot, love is an old man who was consumed by thinking of the woman who, if not for poverty, would've been his wife, love is a wife who her husband left her without a goodbye note, love in there is a young man stealing his mother's money to get out on a date.

We exchanged breaths and kisses too! Whispers! Whisper and wink! If Romeo and Juliette were alive they would've bowed for our love! Things happened and we became enemies; I spit on every corner that had ever gathered us! And she curses every man that had reminded her of me! I deride the pictures and she mocks my writings! Haphazardly, we met in a cold street, time stopped, our body yarned to be clashed for the last time, but our ego was stronger. I lit a cigarette acting as if I don't care, and that's seeing her was not much of a big deal! I hid behind an electric pole till she passes by like arrogant ostrich, she left behind some perfume. The perfume overpowered me and I sat down crying, People had pitied me and threw a few coins into my wet hat. The perfume disappeared and my soul came back, I took the money and went to the nearest bar to drink to my defeat.

My lover is poor, her father is poor and her mother is poorest than him. Every time I ask her to meet, she apologizes, she can't afford a bus ticket and she doesn't even dare to face those monstrous controllers if she got caught riding without a ticket. She just suffices with an apology and a sigh that can barely be heard, but I hear it clearly and I sigh along.

She called asking to meet me this evening, likewise, I apologized for the same reason … I am, too, poor... Poorer than her mother.. poorer than a mouse in a church.

Finally, we met, she was trying to hide the whole in her sneakers, and likewise, I was trying to hide the hole in my pants, if not for my shorts one of my balls could've been showing to people, or even both, it might even show too God forbids in any moment. But thank God we managed to survive from a public scandal that could've killed our dignity as lovers who respect themselves.

Our date was nice as expected, didn't end with a kiss or a hug as all lovers end it, but it ended with a promise of another date, each paid for his coffee with a sporty spirit, we didn't leave even a single dirham for the freaking waiter, he wasn't expecting otherwise anyway, our look was enough to make others pity us, their looks said so.

Our faces changed with the date coming to an end, we were thinking about the same thing, we were thinking about the long miles that we will walk on our weary feet, for we have mischosen the cheep coffee shop, sons of a bitch they didn’t even leave us money for the bus ticket.

We went separate ways without saying goodbye, without a whisper, and without a promise of another date; she grabbed her bag and went with no turning back! She left me like a dull hedgehog, like a hedgehog whose thorns betrayed it. I knew I lost something at that specific moment; I started counting my fingers and my organs, everything in its place! What did I lose? I shoved myself into my coat and let my legs walk me into the unknown, one moment I punch the wind and another time I kick the stones! Her words echoed everywhere, the street and the sidewalks kept telling me that I lost her forever! And that I put a man in my grave the moment her hands reached for her bag! I lost a part of my soul, a huge part.

He was late for her this time, she questioned: what took you so long? He didn't answer! He sat catching his breath, she didn't ask again, they remained silent, he was looking at his shoes and she was looking to the sky. She was praying and he was cursing and reviling in silence, he spits a lot though, he finally spoke: I walked thirty miles to find cigarettes stubs, imagine, yet I couldn't even find one stub! As if suddenly everybody stopped smoking! Fuck! Silent took place again, she put her hands in her pocket and took out some coins; take, buy a cigarette! His eyes shined, he grabbed the coins and indeed bought a cigarette, he smoked it away from her, went back to his place, held her hand and kissed it, he descried a cigarette stub next to her, acted as if he was thinking; I've never seen that lighthouse before, was it always there? Where? There! She looked where he pointed; he took it away quickly and put it in his pocket! It's not a lighthouse! It looks like a lighthouse!

Finally, after long chitchat that went on for a whole two days, we decided to meet! After she kept on insisting, of course, silly girl, she thinks I'm some unique and special; she got tricked by the bullshit I write and my boring talks about books, writers, poets, criminals, and cigarettes tallymen, maybe she imagined me to be a handsome man who's being Surrounded by an aura of dignity, and some phony cleverness. And since boredom can make people do horrible things I agreed to meet her. I had forgotten how to deal with women, but doing something different for a change seemed a good idea. I required a meeting in a bar, not a coffee shop, after an obvious hesitation, the poor thing accepted.

I jumped into the stinky bus with its passengers, I didn’t pay for the ticket, and I was happy with that. 4 Dirhams is a price for a fancy two cigarettes; I was going to betray myself if I wasted them on buying a ticket. Being my bad habit I arrived early, I took a spot in the bar, the waitress penetrating me with her gazes; I want a beer but not now, I am waiting for someone. The wicked didn’t even smile at me, she left dragging her hanging bum as an orphan child, in silence, I insulted her and spitted, the other bitch is late, Moroccan women and their timing, here she's coming, smiling with idiocy, I was going to start scolding when she put two kisses on my bleak face! I am sorry; I couldn't find a place to park! I had to take advantage of the situation, a girl who owns a car! She must be rich; your apology is accepted but you must pay for being late, it's not nice to leave a decent man waiting for so long, if I was someone else I wouldn't have waited this long! Silly girl, she believed me and ordered a bottle of wine, Heaven's Lord, Thank you, I was asking only for a bottle of wine, and here you are blessing me with both a beautiful lady and a bottle of wine, yet you forgot the cigarettes, but it's okay, I will buy them with the ticket’s money.

Her phone shook in joy at the coming of a new message, her heart shook too, she knew it was him, her poor lover, smiling she read the message: please call me! She didn't call, she knew what he wanted, she went to the kitchen, put some food in a plastic bag, stole 3 cigarettes from her father's coat pocket and went quickly up to the roof of the building claiming that she will be deploying clothes, he was there, waiting for her, hunger cutting his bowels, fog in his eyes, he piled himself until she came, she put the food and he started eating it like a wounded dog, he regained some of his power, took the cigarettes, smoke them one by one, she was watching him, smiling, she looked happy, he finished eating and smoking, he reached for her hand and kissed it, he threw himself in her arms and thanked heaven; what did you do today, she whispered in his ears … I wrote a love story! I wrote about you and I, but there are few things my little head couldn't grasp, what does a beautiful lady like you do with a homeless man like me? What interests you in this bag of bones? Couldn't you notice that I hadn't even given you a withered rose in all these three years? She covered his mouth with her hand, kissed his head! It is me who should be asking these questions, but as you can see I didn't! so stop chattering over things that, as you said, your huge mind can’t grasp! They shushed for a moment; I want to listen to some poetry, write me poem now, right now! Okay, hear this one:

My lover is kind
She loves dogs
And just now, she fed one

He was laughing and she was crying, he knew she was crying, he made her cry every time they met in a desperate try to make her angry which will make her leave him, but all his efforts were doomed to failure in front of a sweet and tender lady

For our first date, I took my sweetheart to the cemetery! She was surprised and then said: Is this what you call a romantic place?
Okay, it might not be romantic but it is special though, can’t you see that people do the impossible so they would come here, they even die.

We have been talking via Facebook for almost two years, we have never met, for she works as a United Nations envoy and I work as a journalist for the American newspaper "The Times", and you can only imagine how busy we both are and the lack of time that we always complain about! The chance had it today that we met in one of the streets of the great city of Temara, me with my plastic sandals and pale blouse, and her with her like old people's bum shrunken djellaba! Of course, we ignored each other, since before I go out looking for some cigarette stubs I told her that I was working on writing a new article, and she told me that she was in a meeting that will last till midnight! That's why it was impossible for us to meet! And where? In Temara? No way... No way

After five years of patience, love, admonition, crying, and laughter … it had to end with marriage, otherwise that relationship will no longer have a meaning! Her beautiful eyes bring many beetles ready to mate at any giving moment, but her insane body was holding to the one with holes in his shoe… him, on the other hand, knew very well that one day they will steal her from him.. God only knows how many times he wore the only suit he owned and went towards her house to propose to her at least, but in the middle of the road, he retreats.

In their last meeting, he made her a ring out of a wire that had been eaten by rust, he put it in her slim finger… wait for me, he said! Then he kissed her and left.

Five years were enough for her to understand that he's not coming back! And the phony ring that was she was still keeping, was a mean to tell her that he wants to keep a promise he had never made … but his looks, his anger, his joking said it all … joking one day he told her: I'll marry you even if we turned ninety years old! Everything was against him including himself. Every time silence allowed him to speak he tells her that he runs to her from them, he runs from himself to her… She was both the anchor and the ship.

Everything about my baby is simple, her faded clothes and her sneakers that got cracked out of the frequent use, her heart, her black hair, her wishes, and her dreams … even where we meet is so simple, a corner in the rooftop, we lay on a piece of cardboard, and together we shiver from cold, our hands and lips collide, we exchange breaths and sorrow, she's sad and I'm depressed! We might get married one day, but not now, maybe twenty years from now, when I turn ninety, I will be needing someone to curse and pour all my anger on, I will be needing someone who would remind me of my mistakes and sins, I will be needing someone to look at before I drew my final breath.

I did my job and made my sweetheart happy in this day, valentine’s day that always comes late, we met in the afternoon, after I made sure that she had her lunch in her father’s house, we stole two quick kisses before we could be seen by strangers, our hands tangled and we let out feet leads us to wherever they desired. We walked over ten kilometers, six streets, five alleys; then we took the road from Hassan Tower to Assabah residence, Kamra side! We talked a lot, I actually talked a lot so that her little brain won't think of a great invention called a cab instead of all this weariness! Well, she figured it out in the end, she noticed that she felt tired of walking, so I grabbed her hand and sat on a cement chair that is overlooking on the sea! A romantic place worthy of us, she was looking at me with beautiful eyes, I told her while smiling: happy Valentine's Day my love, and leaned to kiss her hands! The crazy one took away her hands and exploded into my face: happy shit's day, you tired the fuck outta me, see ya brother!

I thought she was joking, but she kept on walking and didn't look back, the bitch left me alone like a tacky hedgehog.

The awe of her being near me was evident in my facial expressions, I was happy, and my happiness was obvious in my dumb smile, a weird feeling I haven't felt for a long time, my heart beats fast, my balls are slouched, my hands are desperately trying to hold her tiny hands, I tried to show my worldly-wise and intellectual personality so I said: I used to sleep in this street! This street was my home! She was shocked and her beautiful eyes got teary, she held my hands and said: what matters is that you're no longer sleeping here! I smiled: you are right, the other street was better than this one, clean street and the doggy cops don't go through it.

Love letters

- My love

  I know that I am the imperfect part of this relationship that will end soon like the relationships that ended before it for the same reason! The truth be told I tried so hard to succeed this time but it looks like I failed again. You keep saying that I consider you just a character from those characters in my head all the time that gambles and drinks cheap wine! Well, that might be right but you are a special persona who is close to me, you are not the waitress or the card distributor, you are the club's owner, the queen and all the other characters are servants willing to kneel under your feet

  And for hell's sake what are waiting from someone who can't even pay for this damn coffee? Let's finish this joke now! You can always find someone who can do better than me, but what about me! don't worry, I can make the waitress a queen at any moment.

- My love

  I must tell you that my chest has become a black and cold like an old women’s vagina, who is seventy years old, I have nothing last that longing could blackmail! Here I am in this bar, drinking a toast to you being gone for the thousands time and I can no longer see you in the bottom of the glass, I asked for the glass to be changed many many times but you weren’t there, my memory of you has faded my darling, nothing had left of you but your faded picture on the screen of my broken phone.

- My darling

  Do you think that after you opening your legs for me I will be crying in regret of sleeping with you? You must be naïve; do you really think that I am seeking the contentment of the angels? I am the last man on earth that wants that for hell's sake! I have criminal tendencies and I fuck whenever I had the chance, and wine almost compensate the blood running through my veins, I proudly carry my sins and walk on earth like an arrogant punk, do you think that I am a man who would want God to pat on his shoulders?

- My dear neighbor

  Indeed, our relationship doesn't surpass a few decent and from afar greetings, but you being in your apartment is relieving! I discovered this two days ago when I noticed that you are not in your place since your WIFI disappeared! Well, I'll confess, I've been using your WIFI all this time! I can't help it dear, for a person can turn to cun when he is poor… but I promise you that this won't last for long because my new novel will be a hit and I might buy you a precious gift as compensation for my misbehavior, but for now, while I am standing on the building's roof, and the sun slapping me on the face, the demonic thoughts has become to invade my skull, and I won't lie to you if I said that earlier I thought of breaking into your apartment, or set on fire some of its parts to force you to come back

  My sincere love, my dear neighbor

- Darling

  A day will come when you will feel nothing but carelessness towards the person who persecuted you, you will feel tired of his pathetic stupidity, then you will forgive him, and with that, he will totally vanish from your life even if he is sleeping next to you.

- Darling

  Let not my weighty words and my empty achievements fool you, for I am still the same person … I still smoke greedily and carry a bottle of alcohol in my coat pocket wherever I go, the cigarettes made me weak as an old man who the time took from him what it took, and alcohol shook my brain like a soldier who was shot in the head … my weird thoughts still increasing day by day, and I get more convinced of them day by day, all your efforts to changing me would definitely fail, it is good what you did when you left

- I saw you, my sweetheart, on the dream port, waiting for the one who will come back from afar dream.. our child was in your hands, you were wrapping him afraid of the cold, and darkness had just started to invade the horizon, and the waves were weltering on the black rocks, you were crying, and laughing in the same time, and the raging waves were saying:

  Go away from here
  He’s not coming back
  Leave … for even the day had left

- My dear

  I’ve had enough of this life! Maybe it is all just like one of destiny’s toys that he threw away after growing sick of it or a grave’s night without light... Writing to you – even though you're just an illusion of my imagination – reduces my body pain and relieves me of distress... Many things had changed in many on both my Intellectual and physiological levels... Of course, they're things that you wouldn't like in your imaginary lover... And of course, no Eve on earth would like them too... I've become addicted on daydreaming; I mean I live on my imagination so I could keep on living, and as much as I neglected myself, my fingernails matched my fingers in length and matched an old plow in rust, my bushy black beard also became covering my chest, this was reflected on my hair whose scope expanded to revolt more on its previous borders... I cannot deny the fact that some strange creatures began to move between its jungles and pastures.

  In addition to what I have said before, my hide - God forbid- took the color of oily grease due to the abundance of adhesions and dirt, what to conclude from this is that I no longer suit to be a lover neither to you nor to any other woman, and that is the greatest calamity.

  I am a defeated person, and a defeated person is he who is in pain, his behaviors are not to be expected, uncensored, he can lose his mind or rather he already did, he can get violent or even despicable, or might do as I will, dig his crypt and disappear forever

  So would you accept me despite what have said? As a man who respects his mind as he respects others I wouldn't wish for that .. and If I am now among the dead, if not so then I am among the missing, and if not then I am among the insane and fools, and that's the least that can happen

  Goodbye

Who am I?

I am a small nail whose half was eaten by rust, a sad man found me in the middle of the road, gently he grabbed me and put me in his bag, I was so happy with my new house, but the man threw me on the floor again, I found myself among many other iron pieces in a scrap market, Goddamn He Will Sell Us! And as I expected, I was bought by another man who seems also sad, He hung me in the wall of his room, the warmth in my new house made me happy, there was nothing else but a mattress made of cardboard and me! What a sweet silence! Today when I woke up I couldn't see the bed in front of me, what happened to my eyes! I understood afterward that the sad man had hung the picture of his beloved on my head, I didn't get that actually until I heard him talking to her: and her you are my darling in my room despite your will.

I am a tree trunk and I fell from my mother’s belly, my mother was the one who threw me away! I don’t know: I was shouting under her feet for her to hear me but she didn’t! A wind blew and threw me away from her! My crying was dim as mothers’ prayers! Aunts took me as a home for themselves. I was swept away by rainstorms, and threw me far away! I was found by a little boy who made a flute out of me! he blows in my head and a beautiful voice comes out of my behind! I loved my new shape! I was happy until the kid got sick of me and threw me in a wooden box and locked it.

I am an incomplete story written on a roughly shredded paper left by an unsuccessful writer in the trash on a cold autumn.

The season had passed to find myself in huge trash, my white dress was stained with stinking and revolting liquids, but it didn’t stop a homeless from saving me, he folded me and put me gently in his pocket, and took me with him to his room.

All the way I was wondering: what would he do of me? I excluded the thought of him reading me, an empty stomach will not bare a pain caused by words, most likely he will use me to whip his bum, but it seems that I will never know, for he had forgotten about me

I am an incomplete story forgotten in a sad homeless man’s pants pocket

I am an older leather bag, useless and emotionless, thrown in an abandon house's basement, inside of it lays yellow papers stained with black ink, words of a miserable writer who killed himself using his pants' belt, his thoughts made him insane, his plans have no beginning nor an end, he had a little child's dream, he dreamt of riding dragons and running in an endless field …a thirty years old forgotten bag.

I am a sigh made by a sad man in a cold night, I made for myself a carcass, put on a skin and come out to the freeze, my whole life is like a burned loaf, carrying terrors in my chest and running barefoot, I am tired, tired of myself, of my persistence on being me, tired of no one feeling a thing towards me, I a silly stack of bones.

Sophisticated nonsense

I like dogs more, cats are greedy creatures that are good only for getting kicked, I tried to get a dog today, I went for a tour in a hope to meet a dog that matches me! All the dogs do anyway, but I am looking for a special dog, different than the others, to find a limping or a blind dog would be great.

I went past an SUV, I got a glimpse of a dog inside of it, he was sad, I approached him, he didn't get scared of me! Actually, he also came close to me! This is exactly what I was looking for, a silent and sad dog. Damn it! There was no dog, rather it was my reflection on the car's window.

Pointlessly, I am hovering around the streets, If I was selling napkins or sunflower seeds I would've made lots of money, but my damn mind is thinking about other things, a thought that always end up horrible. It happens that I send punches towards the air but it dodges it and gets fend off by a stranger's back, furiously he turns to find himself in front of a depressed faded face then thinks that I am just a mad man. Yesterday I spat on my shoe, it turned out that I spat on the shoe of the person sitting next to me in a café, his shoe was beautiful, the owner didn't pay any attention so I didn't get caught. It was a beautiful shoe so I thought of stealing it, but how to do so while he is wearing it! I will wait for the prayer call and I would follow him till he goes praying in the mosque, you can always steel shoes in the mosque, it's that simple. The heretic didn't go to the prayer, instead, I heard him calling his friend on the phone and they agreed on meeting in the Koutoubia bar! Son of a bitch does not pray! Fuck! He and his shoes can go to hell

I have lived enough to ask for a simple ending, to leave in the darkness of night and be carried by some fellows and threw me in my grave in silence I will not be ashamed of Allah and I will face him with my sins, my disappointments, and my perforated shoes. I will not allow him to pat me on the shoulder, for I know well the way to hell

I feel a persisting urge to write a love letter! To acknowledge my feelings! I look around and I can only see the spectrum of women that nothing gathered me with them but transient encounters and cold kisses! My first love is a mother of two now, my last lover was just a pile! Between them were women who left no trace! Just some dolls with which I shared a cup of coffee or a bottle of wine! The moon is watching me through the eyes of one of them! Who? I don't know all the memories were erased! I put the pen aside and started looking through the photo archive for one memory with which I can rehabilitate my rotten soul! All the pictures confirm that I was always alone! A troubled person always carrying cigarettes between his fingers! An ugly person surrounded by a dark aura! How it possible is that someone like that would write a love letter.

I finished a bottle of wine and started writing a love letter to my love Khawla, but all the time I was imagining Laila, it was a love letter indeed but between the lines of love and yen I talked to her about the third hole in my pants! I don't know what the hell made me do so but I did! I added a poetic verse written by Rimbaud that has nothing to do with love, a small passage about an abandoned ship, but it sounded fitting then I ended the letter with a babbler and I ripped it off! The empty bottle was mocking me! I roughly threw it and it hit a cat's head that was sleeping in the corner! I don't like cats anyway! I lied down and there is Laila reappearing again with her chubby ass! I kicked her out so I won't have to masturbate for the tenth time this day.

We all have a butthole! Right? Is there anyone in this world that doesn't have a butthole? We all have buttocks down our back? And down and specifically in the middle, the poop comes out! Right? Everything that we have will come out as poop from there till we die! Think about the amount of shit that our asses threw away till now, that shit that was absorbed by the earth and filled the rivers and seas! How filthy we are! How filthy we are!

I hate the whole of humanity every time I wipe my ass! It is us who filled the earth with all the germs and viruses and now we come complaining! Let's all go to hell!

My fellow cockroach woke me up today! It was panting like a dog, I barely understood what he was saying, and it asked me in wonder: your mom didn't go to the mosque today! Is she becoming an atheist? Or she stopped fighting illiteracy? He made me laugh son of a filthy, why are you asking? It stood upon the cigarette ashtray and screamed at my face: I was going to die today you son of a bitch! Your mom was close to killing me with your plastic sandal! I used to sit in the balcony in her room every afternoon! In the afternoon she is normally in the mosque! I slapped him: don't you know what's happening in the world? Do you no longer read my posts? It must be that ugly cockroach that you keep hanging out with took all your time! Okay get out of my sight, no more air freshener after today and I don’t want to see you with that bitch again! And if u leave this room you will never go back again

Women used to be treated like cattle! And they will never forgive men about it, they will take over the world soon! It's just a matter of time

Unfortunately, that would've happened if they didn't hate each other, if they weren't lousy mothers who keep on giving birth to the same men they are fighting

It's not fair that the sons of bitches thousands of years ago used to drink wine from barrels and slept with women and men alike until their veins dried up, giggled till they cried and roam the world without a passport! And us now, totally incapable of paying for one beer! Embarrassed by asking women for a cup of coffee! We smile with agony, and we are unable to pass through our cities borders, which we die in! and we dream of a less harsh hell than the one we live in.

A carefully thought out void, that's my life, pointless years of crawling, years of self-controlling from morning to evening, years of illusion
I lost the case! I couldn’t be what I wished to be! And forgot who I used to be! I carry in my heart a feeling of non-belonging, I strained myself for things which I have no interest in, I just do it out of empathy! My days are clearly infertile! Stagy laziness turned me to a stubborn old man crawling in search for agony and moodiness

The misery I'm living in was here before I was born! What happened is that I was lucky enough to find it! It wasn't hard anyway; it was obvious in everything I laid my eyes on! In my perforated shoes, in my lover's heart, in the widows whining, in the cigarettes seller's eyes, in my mother's crying and my father's silence, this misery is my only hope in this life! With it, I breathe and with it I will suffocate.

Sometimes it seems to me that it is relieving to write about people in a bad way, it calms my nerves, some sort of entertainment, a new way of facing all the shit I see in the street! And other times I want to apologize to everyone I've ever written about or thought of doing so! And yet I always find an excuse that allows me to offend them with a clear conscience! Even if I had a good relationship with them, I can't help but search for the slightest reason to curse and insult! It is enough for them to ask me "how am I" to wake up the devil inside of me! Son of a bitch what's in it for you? I am in a miserable state, with what is the mocking me! How are you, what would it do well to you? I don't know what I am reacting this way, maybe because I am fully aware of me not being fine, I was never fine and I will not be! Pathetic I know

I will die one day, and I will be born again for sure, I will be born in Morocco again, and will live the same life! My luck, and I know the son of bitch well enough

The déjà vu generation, we wake up with laziness, we clean our bodies, sometimes we don't, with no appetite we eat, we close our eyes for a second to find ourselves in a café, say hi to the guys, cigarettes, coffee, incomplete conversations, dumb smiles, loud laughs in which we hide our stress. That's our way of surviving from one day to the other! We don't care about tomorrow, we are a generation that knows the unknown! We know well what's going to happen tomorrow! Because we are just one day old, one day that keeps on repeat.

Kobe Bryant died, he can go to hell, I don't know him anyway, they say he was tall and he can shoot balls into a basket, he was great they said, sons of a bitch, they assign greatness to whomever. My dog was greater than him, the poor creature died this morning after a long struggle with hunger, I had nothing but cigarettes and I shared them with him, he was smoking quietly, never complained, never barked at my face, never woke me up from sleep, didn't leave my side for even an hour, he knew I had no one but him, he understood me when I talk to him through the cold nights, he bares my heavy head when I fall asleep on his back, and even when my girlfriend is with me he would stay away so I won't get embarrassed by him while kissing her! He knew well I am a shy man. Who's the greater now? A tall man throwing balls in a basket? Or a beautiful animal who understands humanity?

I used to tell my girlfriend that no one will ever love her as I do, she used to cry, and at some point, she believed me. This morning she passed In front of me with her husband in a fancy car and a golden ring on her finger. What sort of a liar am I, and the poor girl took nothing from me but some lousy poems and a plastic flower that I used to ask her about each time we'd met, where is the flower I bought you? Is it safe? Still red? What a horrible man I am, the poor me

We stumble in life like lunatics, it is hard for us to understand why we're born in the first place, we can't stand in front of a mirror and yell at it: what the hell are we doing here! Giving birth was always a blessing that requires thankfulness and gratitude, a part of the past that shouldn't be harmed, but at one point it becomes a crime, the purest evil ! this is something prophets didn't mention, maybe they neglected it or forgot about it, it doesn't matter now it's already too late! human beings committed all kinds of crimes, mostly the crime of parenthood.

I go back to Rabat sad as a kid who refuses to go to school after a sweet vacation. I will be back to sacrifice my internal loneliness again and surrender myself to pointless conversations, it is a pathetic feeling to be buried alive, buried in my mother's silence and alive in my friends' giggles, it is really sad, for in my twenties I used to believe in my miserable destiny, yet still, I used to dream and ask for more from life, today everything changed a quiet end to my life would satisfy me no details or questions asked, and I have no shame in learning as cigarettes tallyman.

It happens that I dream of life, I admit that and I feel ashamed of myself for doing so, but I do and I make of my imagination what others make of it too, parties, cars, money and women, it is true that that won't last for long and I would wake up of this comedy, so I laugh out loud at seeing myself there, the thing is as if my mom saw me naked, what misery!

Being here, in this little beautiful city, I discovered for the thousand time that the difference between me and others is bigger than ever, inside of me I felt a horrible distance between me and the world, shit had swept my soul out of this life and make a huge hole in it, I've always been opposed to other people's thought and a fierce critic of their way of living even though I've always been and still like humanity, the horrible void I'm living has become obvious now, and if I didn't know space well enough I would have said that it is as big as Jupiter, my relationships with others and especially my family had taken a cold and painful look, a malicious feeling that keeps on growing day by day, and no doubt that my end will be nothing but madness.

Boredom had devoured my brain, I stood up like an old boat's sail, then I started wondering quietly in the house's room as if I'm in a funeral, hands in the back, head down and feet kicking anything, I kicked a book of the late Mohamed Shahrour and it disappeared under the bed; I hope I would remember it afterward, the phone rang, it wasn't her so I didn't pick up, I draw a scary creature on the room's wall, he looked like me, I was afraid of it to stay alone so I drew him a girlfriend, she was scary too, I knew she would leave him one day so I whipped her off and drew in her place a limp dog, the creepy creature looked sad, barely got to know her and I deprived her of him, but I did it just for his own good, he won't understand that now but he will do later, me too I couldn't understand why my mother was singing in the kitchen while I was about to cut my arteries, I've always hated her for that, but I finally understood why!

What happened is that the males of the 70s and 60s generation had been busy with work, what made their relationships with women to be largely turbulent and cold, even though that most of them are married, now that their bank account is full, which woken up their sexual orgasms, the females of their same generation couldn't fulfill their desires, so the solution was to turn to 90s' women, and by that I mean the little girls, a fair relationship to some extent, the elders have their youth back in girl's arms and the girls benefit from the elders' pockets, till now the solution is clear, but what about the 70s' women and today's young boys? Women had done the impossible with their husbands to find themselves now in competition with sculptured buttocks, and today's young boys are lost and can't afford to give what the elders offer.

It has become clear now; that what happened with me was not merely insomnia or depression that might go with time, but more of a fierce was between the child I was, a child who dreamt of being a teacher who would talk to his students about the beauty of life, and the old man that I had to become who settles for watching and warning kids in the streets from life, don't grow up, you sons of a bitch, it's a trap, don't get married as your parents did, don't reproduce, history always proves that parents are wrong It looks like I got carried by thinking, by playing the role of a wise man who had discovered the puzzle of life.

I'm sitting like a tired elephant, fighting a demonic thought which I have no clue from where the hell she came, thought of me being insane at any moment, now, after an hour, one day… I'd rather be a louse than to be crazy, it is really scary …

I know that people carry a virus that gnaws their skull, or some sort of a daily decay, a weird type of evil, unjustified discontent, indefinite complicated life … they all realize that one way or another, and yet they can ignore it, not like me, and nothing is more horrible than being unable of ignoring.

I want to do what everybody does without a prick of conscience, things that look simple like killing a fly but they hurt me, and I think that the payment for the suffering that I'm living is to die like a dog I'd rather die like a dog than to become a fool.

I talked to Allah today, I didn’t do that for a long time for he is angry with me, beer and Khawla’s nipples were the reason of the estrangement, I neglected him and he did the same to me, but we talked today, an incomplete conversation that has neither a beginning nor an end, I asked him for five Dirham, I promised him to go to a place empty from people so he would give it to me there, that would be our little secret, I waited for half an hour, an hour, I didn't get the Dirham, I asked for the half of them, nothing happened, I got upset then sat down cursing, some kids passed by and beat me, took my shoes and a freaking phone in which I used to keep my love's picture, I returned to my room disappointed, I was disappointed in Allah and I promised myself not to ask anything from him anymore.

A rainy day, a sweet day that was long waited for, and yet, like every beautiful thing that had happened with me, I had to make it a faded beauty with my pathetic thoughts, because as much as I'm going to enjoy the view of rain as it washing me from inside, as much as darkness will grow big inside of me while thinking about those who would be harmed by rain, the poor ones that will only have the silent prayers of their mothers as a shelter, the poor ones that will sigh every morning before going out with their perforated shoes to face the freezing weather and the demonic humans in one battle from which they will barely walk out without losing a part of them, the sad ones who will smile because the situation will just get worse … but what does sorrow mean if it was the poor ones? Yet the masters' sorrow is a luxury that the weak ones dream of every night, what is rain for then? Something beautiful that they look at from their fancy car windows and their expensive fun coat! And nature might even bless them with a bazaar view of a sad man running slowly to hide in some place where rain won't touch him, but he falls in the middle of the road and his fragile bones would hit the sidewalk! A creepy view as this might be a joke to the masters in cold evenings and glasses of wine laying proudly in their soft hands.

I write them and the thunder sound getting more and more horrid as if nature confirms with an audible sound what I'm writing now, after the thunder some non-understandable cold drops of rainfall, does the sky cry out of sorrow upon those that I've talked about or does she just want to see the man that the sidewalk had been rough on him and broke of some of his bones.

I’m drinking a dark liquid, I read some Quranic verses on it, in the beginning, hoping that it will turn into a whiskey, it didn't, I got disappointed so I left it aside, I play with my fingers and thinking of asking for a simple loan from my sweetheart, how would I do it for hell's sake, love is something and asking for money is something else, it is enough that she pays for coffee and cigarettes, I shouldn't be greedy, I felt the thought and got back to my fingers, ten fingers, I made sure of that three times, what if I lost a finger or two? I don't think that that would ever happen, and even if it did it is okay, huh! What if I sold a finger, the middle finger might be sold for a good price, since it is not just a finger, it can be used as a weapon too, or foreplay some girl's vagina, I need to sell something, anything.

We were born on the edge of the grave, we sound have stayed there, where we belong, but a slight faint sparkle in the horizon that amazed us, it was tempting so we followed it, and we got lost in the way we were rejected by the graves afterward and the road becomes harsh on us... we made ourselves new graves that we called a room, and we hang in it walks pictures of Hitler and Marilyn Monroe! As time goes on, it narrowed on us so we replaced it with bigger houses, many big rooms, and all the entertainment means, we thought that it won't strangle us as the other rooms did, but it did, so we went out looking for an alternative, nature is the best alternative, mountains, and plains, we carried our baggage and went looking for a safe place, the sun stinging us one time and the rain wetting us the next time, until we reached our destination, our grave that we had left the first place, sat on its edge asking for forgiveness, life had worn us enough and we won't take rejection for an answer anymore, the graves are stubborn by nature, cold like an elder's vagina, and it rejected us, and we stayed there, on the edge of the grave waiting.

My friend the cockroach, my roommate, although it is jobless and doesn't pay for the rent, he was my only friend and I loved him, but his jokes are annoying sometimes, yesterday it tried to tickle my ear but it slide inside, it took me two liters of water to get it out, it slept under the bed afterward scared of punishment, I let it until it forgot about it and sprayed some air freshener, I watched him stumble as a tacky drunk, it could barely take two steps and fell unconscious! I knew it wasn't dead; cockroaches don't die … this morning I had a glimpse of him sitting like a happy king with six female cockroaches around him! It smiled at me and said: thank you for the air freshener, my friend.

Another day in Rabat, I know well what it means to live in a city like this, the smell of urine and betrayal comes from its long wall, stinky smell that a city that was forced to be called Rabat is not worthy of! The sissy traitors spreading corruption all over it, sitting in desks and bars and drinking each other's blood, and exchanging dumb smiles and threats.

Beetles are walking in its streets without a destination, nobody cares for them! Those fleas that are stuck in the back of their pants.

The atrocious thing is a girl wearing her dream dress walking with a childish joy so as the world sees her beautiful dress … the good thing here is a bunch of men with mustaches sitting in a café and looking at that little piece of flesh showing from the breast of the girl wearing the dress, complaining and cursing her father in secret.

Many think that it's a dream city, city of prosperity and richness, that's right, but just in a small part of it, the part where the sultan and his citizen, but the rest and their citizens are in the sewers.

I'm a simple and poor man my friend, my poverty is deliberate because the path I chose to walk in is the road of poverty, and I really hope that it will end with wealth! That's why I don't recommend befriending me now because you'll get sick of me quickly, I'm also a bad friend, disobedient and tacky, I practice all type of disobedience and ask for forgiveness every night that I don't deserve! And I won't think that your mom would want you a friend like me.

I'm a hopeless human being my dear, I don't advise to come near me, my relation with love is like the relationship between the national football team and the CAF (Africa Cup of Nations), doesn't achieve anything in it and leaves it quickly. So I fit neither as a lover nor even a friend, because the friendship between Adam and Eve is impossible for me. Ridiculous and void, I don't believe that marriage is a stage that everyone should reach in the end, for who doesn't fit to be a lover will never fit to be a husband.

My problem, my dear, is that people hate nothing in my characters but those I cherish, and what I hate is people and myself demonically holding me accountable for them, I don’t forgive mistakes, and I don’t give second chances … and if not this holding me accountable issue, I would have accepted myself and many others.

Khaoula

I have seven characters that I have to deal with almost daily, I think about them and for them, their outfits, their food, their cigarettes, their alcohol, and where they would sleep … I provide for their all their needs as a good father, and none of them had ever disrespected me till yesterday when Khawla insulted me, I thought it's okay, after all, she is crazy, and I tried to calm her down so I won't have to cut her tongue out in the future. After a short conversation it becomes clear that she has been faking madness all this time and that she is smarter than me, she said in a threatening language and quietly: You must be crazier than I am, you killed me in the fourth chapter and revived me in the ninth, I will never forgive you for that

I threw the papers aside, lighten up a cigarette, and started to think about what she'd said, what has the fourth chapter to do with the ninth? I slowly reread the chapters and … how dumb I am, the loony defeated me

Six o’clock in damned time, nothing till now shows that today will different than the others, the sun will throw the quilt aside and will rise on us soon, Khawla too will throw her pajamas aside and where that tight yellow pants that the café goers like, and the white shirt from which two stunning nipples overlook making the goers’ mouths water, Rid is one week away and must seek any mean to earn their pockets, peacock galt at a time, and Fifi Abdo’s laugh at other times, winking, whispering and trickery …

Let’s leave Khwala aside and wake up Ziad, he wasn't asleep anyway just his mind was numb, he can't think of anything now but his morning cigarette, for even if he was smoking all night long the 7 am cigarette is always a must, it helps him face what had last of the day before it he takes a sniff of a snus/snuff made in Fez to surprise the lazily asleep cells inside of his skull, a piece of a plain loaf and a cup of tea without sugar then jogs to the café to be the first one Khawla with flirt with, just then he can smoke his precious cigarette. Khawla’s mood today is bad because her luck pants had been torn apart in a spot that can't be fixed, so she just her pale black pants that make her butt look like five liters of Harira soup in a plastic bag, she took a glimpse of Ziad from far away, asked forgiveness from Allah then spat: a face I needn't see, fuck! He passed by her without greeting her, normally he doesn't talk till after he smokes his blessed cigarette, he took his spot in a corner that allows him to watch everyone, especially Khawla’s butt, she had made his coffee without asking for it, she spat in it and presented it to him without smiling, he knew well that she spits in his coffee every day but he drinks it in front of her on purpose to disgust her.

What the hell happened to me? What sort of a miserable life that I always keep on choosing for my poor personalities, what kind of unfairness and despicable behavior is this? I seek refuge with Allah from the accursed Satan

In the queue, Khawla proudly stands as an ostrich that came to life after an illegal relationship between an arrogant peacock and lost ostrich, her black pants and elegant white shirt that suggest that she is a flight attendant, but the truth is she is just a waitress and a fancy café in Riad district, the despicable Taxi was long awaited, she started to think of seeking for a small taxi, but the bill will be high, that's why she decided to wait, it's okay, since she is in a relationship with the café owner then he won't scolded her for being late, behind her stands a weird man, his hands are rough, and his mustache implies that he is a construction worker, a simple man who made use of the hustle to come near her and smell the awful odor coming from her neck, and from time to time he reach his hands to touch her waist and apologizing all the time, at the beginning she got upset but without he little brain noticing she got lost in her wild imagination, she imagined the one with the moustache naked in front of her, roughly kissing her, his breath mixed with cigarettes " Marquise" made it more rousing, her soft hands reached in and grabbed his blazing organ, she didn't know that a girl as sweet as her can have such imagination, eccentric as this, the she whispered: I seek refuge in Allah from the accursed Satan, the damn taxi had finally came, Unfortunately for her and fortunately for him they sat next to each other in the first seats, the heat coming from her thigh set the poor man's veins on fire, but he controlled himself and tried to think of his fat wife, he quickly got her out of his head and whispered: There is no power but from God. She in the other hand, her focus had switched to the driver who intentionally mixes between her thigh and the transducer, desire had controlled her so she let him do what he wanted, she bent round against her will and her hands over the mustache man's sexual organ because of which he was about to be suffocated out of happiness, she finally woke up when she felt o breeze of cold between her legs, asked the driver to stop and in embarrassment, she got off, the mustache man and the driver both couldn't understand a thing and translated what happened with a dumb smile

I will quit smoking, I will stop writing and I will retreat from life for the sake of my lover, I will be transformed to a filthy rat that suddenly gets out from his hole to steal some pieces of jewelry leaving behind him hundreds of curses for a smile of satisfaction from my love, I will skin a human monkey off and make of his skin a shoe that would suit my lover's beauty, I will dance for her just like how Zorba dances when he is high, thousands of poems I shall recite to her exactly how Rimbaud recite them on the abandoned boats, I will kiss her as if I am kissing thousands of women, I will make her dangle like a dove in a freezing cold, and I will cheat on her dozens of times for sure.

She used to take steps ahead of me while we were walking in the street, through that she says to the beetles passing by us that she is not with me, she doesn't know me, he is just a stray dog that keeps on following her all the road all the time, she is disgusted by my shoes every time, I stopped to smoke a cheap cigarette that I carry in my also cheap coat pocket, she waits for me and looks at me with disgust, I smile at her face and she bend around her neck, I could barely hear her whisper: God why did u afflict me with this kind!

I asked a loan from my sweetheart, it wasn't hard as I attend it to be, quietly she put her hands in her bag and handed me whole ten dirhams, I tried to hide my joy, plans started to come out of my Cyclic bulb unstoppably, my pupils expanded, I kissed her forehead and said goodbye,

Walking slowly thinking of the ten dirhams, probably I would go to the café, a cup of coffee and a cigarette, no no, I will buy four fancy cigarettes and stay in my room, I might read a book, or watch a movie, that's what I am going to do …

ten steps, cigarettes' seller in front of me, I put my hand in my pocket, the ten dirhams had disappeared, I forgot that my pants pocket had a hole in it, son of a bitch did it to me once again, I took it off and went back home naked.